

The moon: poets and composers have written more about this subject than any other, apart from, maybe, love. Jenny Evans has gone beyond the Great American Song Book: classical themes, oriental sounds and the impressionist composers Erik Satie and Claude Debussy are all part of her concept, as well as songs by Sting, Van Morrison and Konstantin Wecker and standards like "Moonlight Serenade" and "How High The Moon".